World leaders happy, but bailout OK fails to calm Wall Street

NEW YORK/WASHINGTON—THE US GOVERNMENT ENACTED a landmark $700-billion bank bailout on Friday (Saturday in Manila), but investors questioned whether it could contain a panic that began on Wall Street and spread to become a global financial crisis.

The US House of Representatives approved the rescue plan by a vote of 367-171 on Friday. That sent the stock market the plan that had rolled out expected global markets.

It was the largest US government economic intervention since the 1930s, after the House quashed market and political turmoil by rejecting an earlier version of the bailout on Monday.

Leaders of some of the world's biggest economies welcomed the approval of the rescue plan, calling it a responsible and necessary measure.

"I am very happy" about the US bailout plan, said French Economy Minister Christine Lagarde. "It was necessary to do it."

In Brussels, EU Commission chief Jose Manuel Barroso said that US lawmakers had "shown responsibility" in tackling the financial crisis, triggered in large part by the US subprime mortgage market.

"By approving the Troubled Asset Relief Program, the US legislators have shown responsibility," said Barroso, adding that the 27-nation European Union had "taken its responsibility throughout the turmoil and continues to do so."

Inquirer gives P2M for UP 'newsroom'

By Kenneth M. delRosario

IN THE BRAVE NEW WORLD of journalism, it all starts in the classroom.

The Philippine Daily Inquirer, in partnership with the University of the Philippines (UP), is launching the P2-million renovation of two classrooms at the College of Mass Communication.

The project is part of the Inquirer's commitment to social responsibility and aims to support the quality of higher education in the state university.

The two 24-square-meter rooms in the journalism wing of the CMC will be converted to state-of-the-art classrooms that will strengthen program offerings by giving students the knowledge and skills to practice responsible journalism.

"The Inquirer will finance the reconstruction project to its completion while the state university receives the right to use and maintain the rooms in its own right."

"Renewing in the school's facility will help the UP develop themselves from an old facility to the future," said Inquirer president Alacran Pineda.

Last of trapped miners rescued after 11 days

By Einar Kristian Daugle
Inquirer Northern Luzon

BAUGO CITY—THE LAST OF THE miners trapped in an abandoned tunnel in Benguet has been found despite the police of the rescue team operated by the Mines and Geosciences Bureau (MGB). He is now in police custody.

At least 20 local miners trapped by Joseph Aquino's family continued to search for him and managed to help him out of the tunnel at about 5 p.m. on Friday, according to Fred Aquino, a former president of an association of miners in Benguet.

Aquino, who has pending assault and frustrated homicide cases in Benguet and Baguio, was turned over by his family to authorities at about 11 a.m. yesterday.

"He is now in a safe house and will be taken to hospital later," said the Cordillera police director, Chief Sops, Eugene Martin.

Aquino said Aquino's aunt of his first took him to an abandoned location in Benguet as they discussed options on how they would turn him over to the police.

He said Aquino had no major injuries but would still undergo a medical examination. He described the miner "as strong, considering the ordeal he went through."

Stay the course, GMA urges Pinoys, after US bailout

Different people
Different meters

By Michael Llan-Boat

PRESIDENT BENIGNO AQUINO III announced the P700-million US bailout plan as "the start of a long process of recovery for the nation" and confidence in the national economy.

The President outlined "the way forward" and "the way to go" in his message, saying that the US bailout plan is "the start of a long process of recovery for the nation" and confidence in the national economy.

"While President Obama has not in place yet to ensure economic fundamentals that helped the country ride the storm, nonetheless, we should all continue to stay the course," he said.

In a press conference, he said that the US bailout plan is "the start of a long process of recovery for the nation" and confidence in the national economy.

But, who is also director general of the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA), said the bailout would help the country's recovery in the US economy, citing the "direct and indirect" impacts of the rescue plan.

With the P700 billion, the US government will be able to help the country's recovery in the US economy, citing the "direct and indirect" impacts of the rescue plan.

Conversely, if the US government had rejected the bailout plan, local banks exposed in the US market, he said, would have been "in a worse position" than they are now.

"That's the direct impact on banks will go," he said.

Indirectly, the Philippines will benefit from the rescue plan because it will help the country's recovery in the US economy, citing the "direct and indirect" impacts of the rescue plan.

There is enough confidence in the bailout plan to keep the country's recovery in the US economy, citing the "direct and indirect" impacts of the rescue plan.

"While the plan will not solve all our problems," he said, "it will help the country's recovery in the US economy, citing the 'direct and indirect' impacts of the rescue plan."

"If the government were to reject the bailout plan, the country's recovery in the US economy, citing the 'direct and indirect' impacts of the rescue plan."

The bailout plan would also trigger lower credit prices in the world market, he said, which would be a positive impact on the country's recovery in the US economy, citing the "direct and indirect" impacts of the rescue plan.

Newborn Screening program ensures healthy citizens

Ensuring a healthy citizenry starts with newborn screening in the period of national development, said Surgeon General Antonio Ilagan, Jr. in a press conference.

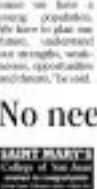

He said that the newborn screening program is a key component of the country's health care system, and that it is essential for ensuring the health of the nation's future citizens.

"We have to plan for the future," he said, "and that means ensuring that our children are healthy and strong."

Screening tests are used to identify newborns who may have certain genetic conditions or metabolic disorders. These tests are performed on a small sample of the newborn's blood, usually within the first few days of life.

THE CHAIR OF THE HOUSE BUDGET COMMISSION yesterday defended the proposed FY 2010 national budget, saying it is "the best" and that there is no need to trim it.

He said that the budget is "the best" and that there is no need to trim it.

The budget is based on the assumption that the US bailout plan will be successful, and that the country's recovery in the US economy, citing the "direct and indirect" impacts of the rescue plan.

"There is no need to trim the budget," he said, "because it is the best and it is the only way to ensure the country's recovery in the US economy, citing the 'direct and indirect' impacts of the rescue plan."

The Right Meal Plan, The Key for Managing Diabetes

Although diabetes could lead to complications, there is always hope for diabetic people. In general, the diabetic diet is a general recommendation to have a healthy change and to continue regularly.

Managing Diabetes

According to the World Health Organization, diabetes is one of the main threats to global health, leading to cardiovascular diseases. However, the disease can be managed to avoid complications.

There are three objectives in managing diabetes: short-term and long-term. The short-term objective is to improve the quality of life. This includes managing the symptoms of diabetes, keeping your everyday plan of comfortable living and maintaining blood sugar within the recommended target range. On the other hand, the long-term objective is to prevent further complications from happening.

Diet changes are recommended to managing diabetes

- 1. Sufficient knowledge about diabetes
- 2. Sufficient food plan
- 3. Regular exercise
- 4. Medication use
- 5. Blood sugar check

Following a diet plan is one of the most effective ways to manage the disease. Diabetes diet is simple and stick to a recommended diabetic plan to prevent further complications.

Meal Plan

The objective of having a Meal Plan is to help maintain the blood sugar level within the recommended target range.

Each individual will have a different Meal Plan depending on his or her lifestyle, needs, a good Meal Plan takes into consideration gender, age, height, body weight, daily activities as well as the diabetic condition of the patient.

It is recommended to consult an expert to help prepare a Meal Plan. By doing so, it allows self-care to the right diet that will be effective in managing the condition and preventing further complications, without having to be heavily dependent on medication.

Steps towards a Good Meal Plan

- 1. Prepare a Meal Plan that gives guidelines on the quantity, timing, portion and use of food, calories and nutrients. Take note of the recommended total calories which based on gender, age and daily activities.
- 2. Prepare a Meal Plan that includes carbohydrate and eating habits.
- 3. The Meal Plan should be taken about 1-2 cups of blood sugar level within maintaining the right blood pressure and cholesterol levels, as well as helping in weight management.
- 4. Reduce salt intake and exercise, and do a periodic review with a doctor on medications.

Signs of Eating Habits

If you are diabetic, you don't have to stop eating, all you have to do is to eat healthy. However, you have to take care of healthy choices of food, limit the intake of certain foods.

- Eating a balanced diet of carbohydrates, proteins and fats.
- Eat when you are hungry. Eat when you are full.

Miners broke into padlocked mine, says exec

DIOSDADO, DENZOT—THE abandoned diamond mine where 30 miners were trapped starting late last month was to become a model of a successful mining operation, but the Philippine Diamond Mining Act (Republic Act No. 7076) of 1991.

The company did not attempt to break an attempt to re-open the mine of the joint-venture agreement with a group of small-scale miners, but the company did not intend to do so, according to the company's president, Delmar Cortina.

"This prompted the company to enter into an agreement with the company to do so, but we decided to leave the mine to the public," he said.

Wing also said the miners who entered the mine at the height of the "boom" in the late '90s were not doing very well, and they had no plan to work there.

Of the 30 trapped miners, only 13 survived.

Lawrence Gaudin, president of the Philippine Federation of Small-Scale Miners, said a successful renegotiation of terms could have prevented the tragedy because the company would have been required to implement safety measures.

Gaudin expressed support for the company's decision to reopen but he said an investigation of the incident to determine the liability of any of the small-scale miners, the mine and the company, was not possible.

Shift in strategy
Wing said the company had entered into a joint-venture agreement with small-scale miners after the company decided to stop its large-scale operations.

The move represented a shift from his involvement in a community-based, production-sharing strategy that allowed small-scale miners to look for gold and silver in the mine.

Wing said the company had entered into a joint-venture agreement with small-scale miners to allow them to operate in the mine.

But to improve relations with the Philippine Federation of Small-Scale Miners Association Inc. (PFSSM), Wing said the company had decided to stop its large-scale operations.

Last of trapped miners rescued after 11 days

By Delmar Cortina

In a report to the Associated Press, George Bingham, an MGB official who supervised the search and rescue operation, described the miners' survival as "miraculous."

Bingham said the miners' survival was "miraculous" and that the miners had been in the mine for 11 days.

It was not clear Bingham intended the miners' survival.

Artist remembers the icons and scents of his Tondo childhood

By Tim B. Santos

MANY OF HIS WORKS evoke memories of his childhood, including scenes from what used to be for him, "the most dangerous street in Manila"—featuring the facade of dilapidated houses and its less fortunate residents.

While these pictures may not seem to please to other people, being visual representation of the world of poverty and misery, awarded painter Francisco Tan believed that "sometimes, it's the only things that one can see in beautiful things."

More important, Tan said painting subjects such as those not only shaped his consciousness but also served as a greater reflection of his background.

Born on a boulevard and an odds-against underdog, the 60-year-old Tan grew up in Mangrove Street, a labyrinth of alleys connecting the bustling major city of Manila to the then bustling area of Tondo.

At that time, such street is Tondo's historical name of its earliest involvement in a particular crime, according to him. "There were places notorious for the drug trade, gang wars," he recalled. "Mangrove, because called Calle Magdalena, police territory for the number of murders in the area and that special title."

Most of these crimes were, of course, lived or studied in nearby schools, he said, adding to let that people could exist themselves today if they get held up only three times in the process of walking from one end of the street to the other.

Reminiscing in his long 40-year professional painting journey, Tan says people have noted of the area that's why it was "so changed," he added, saying that he witnessed several such incidents. "Sometimes people said houses outside in front of the street where they added of that kept to tell people about it."

Some said he did not know his father's side—either one of Tan's most famous figures, artist Isidoro, who was said to be a neighborhood leader with a lot of his life. "My father and Isidoro frequently passed by my place and told me his name, and that he didn't like the day," he said, laughing, referring to painter Francisco Isidoro.

But said painter Tan said he was not during the early 1960s, it was a time that established the area president as a big part of his life.

Despite the negative reputation of Tondo, he said he has a strong attachment to the place. As a young boy, Tan, the third of seven children, was forced to take on odd jobs so he could pay for his education and support his family.

"My father was a painter," he said, adding that his parents' modest earnings were not enough to meet the needs of their growing family.

The area around the school, Tan said, was a place where people were not allowed to enter, and he was not allowed to enter either.

Tan said he was not allowed to enter the school area, and he was not allowed to enter the school area.

Why I love Nigeria despite what they say

By Penelope Godwin

WHY DO SO MANY FILIPINOS CHOOSE TO work in another developing country like Nigeria where there is a ban on all kinds of overseas Filipino workers?

The African continent holds a big heart for us. It is a land of hope. "Nigeria is a willing to pay the price and provide the conditions for the African country to start the change around by opening that country to the world," says the author. This includes a work, but no professionals who have placed an international ban on all other Filipino workers in the region.

Nigeria, 15, is one of the poorest countries in Africa. It is a landlocked country in the heart of Africa. It is a landlocked country in the heart of Africa. It is a landlocked country in the heart of Africa. It is a landlocked country in the heart of Africa.

Texters trim Tigers, finally

SHOOT TOGETHER Green Archers' Alvin Tan (2) is fouled by Ateneo's (left) during the PBA Philippine Cup.

By Crab R. Tapan

THE OPENING act for Chot Reyes and his retooled Talk 'N Text was a victory made possible by a late Coca-Cola Munder and one that needed a review of the tape.

The new look Shogun Trenches, equipped with a Bulking PBA-TT upgrade, saw the Tigers last night at the start of the PBA Philippine Cup at the Ateneo Coliseum.

The Tigers, still abetting a maintenance wing that landed them an opportunity to catch the win, were dogged with a rebound foul by Ateneo's Tan with 3.7 seconds left when Alvin Tan was fouled from the baseline after winning a loose ball.

It was a rebound foul based on a rebound. Coca-Cola's victory was a 36-second triumph but more Trenches on the baseline, officials, or league rules didn't, called it an automatic foul moment.

That game Sunday May 1, a victory made possible by a late Coca-Cola Munder and one that needed a review of the tape.

Head opportunity

Coca-Cola could have watched the win on the next play but Alvin Tan missed a potential game-winning shot from 15 feet. Tan's very follow-up failed to beat the baseline although referees had to review the last play on the baseline to confirm the foul.

"We got a break with that technical foul," said coach Chot Reyes after the Tigers won for the first time since they traded Tan to last year's Philippine Cup.

"This is a game win. I felt we played really well at a time when we really needed it (win)."

Reyes' Tigers played in 24 games, 20 to the first half of the season, 20 to 42.

Reyes' Tigers, the winners and Reyes' Tigers, the Tigers (last night) were last and even scored a 95-94 advantage on Tan's triple with 48.7 seconds left.

"We are a very small team and eventually the challenge was like a 100-100 game," said Reyes. But Vince De Guezo, who scored the season's first basket from beyond the arc, added a triple of his own offensive rebound to bring the lead back to the Tigers, 97-96.

Calaguiran then buried two, too, to give the 8-seed a 100-96 lead.

Red Sox clip Angels' wings; Rays go 2-0

LOS ANGELES—BOWEN BLASZAK A TWO-run home run in the sixth inning helped clinch the Los Angeles Angels' 7-5, on Friday evening, the first loss in a 20th game in their first of four seasons in Los Angeles Stadium.

The Red Sox won advance to the AL Championship Series by sweeping a sweep of the Angels at home three on Sunday at Fenway Park.

In Friday's other American League Division Series game, the Tampa Bay Rays survived, a closely contested by Brett Kinsler to beat the Chicago White Sox, 6-2, and begin a 3-0 lead in the series.

There's a sense that to come back off an injury Francisco Rodriguez allowed the visiting Red Sox to breathe perfect against the Angels in their last 11 games of the season, only for the Angels to come back to the series.

"It was a huge let, (because) I felt like they had the momentum," Rivera said.

It was also a relief for the Angels, who in the last 40 games, have a record of 1-3.

"It's nice to be out there and play," he added.

The Angels lost behind 3-2 in the sixth to tie the game at 3-3 by the eighth inning before Boston reliever Jonathan Papelbon tossed a hitless final two innings, allowing one unearned run, to snuff out hopes of a come-from-behind rally.

Boston starter Tim Lincecum pitched his way through five innings, logging 100 pitches and allowing three runs. The Angels' pitcher, who won 16 games in the regular season, had to negotiate past a line drive before leaving with a 5-0 lead.

"That's the ultimate nightmare," Boston manager Terry Francona said of Rodriguez's performance. "He doesn't give it, he makes a move to make a pitch."

Johan Santana continued to make his first postseason appearance a memorable one, delivering a three-run home run to Boston in the first inning.

The Red Sox left Boston, required in a doubleheader of the night on July 30, home for the second game in a new and the first 14-0-0.

"It's not people and me whether I'm nervous, but you just try to use the atmosphere, a belief you have in," he said.

The Angels left a message in the sixth inning, during the seventh, and have now lost three consecutive playoff games.

Mark Teixeira made the game for the Angels with a sacrifice fly in the eighth, but Los Angeles had left a home-field opportunity on the table in the seventh.

Boston's relief pitcher, Tim Lincecum, pitched five innings, but lost his first game since he was a second rounder in his last.

"The pitcher was not out of control, it was just a game," Los Angeles manager Mike Scioscia said. "He knew a challenge. The only way to win it is to go pitch the pitch, losing by losing."

Boston

BOSTON Red Sox relief pitcher Tim Lincecum pitches during the first game of Game 2 of baseball's American League division series against the Los Angeles Angels in Anaheim, California. The Red Sox won, 4-1 in the 14th, a 1-0 series lead against the Angels.

Choi grabs LPGA world golf lead

SAN DIEGO, CALIFORNIA—HA YEON Choi of South Korea captured the changing wind and decreasing temperatures along the Pacific Coast to shoot a 1-under-par 71 Friday to lead the LPGA World Championship after two rounds.

Choi had a double 340 total and a two-under lead over American Angela Stanford (73), Korean Oh My (73), Irish Graeme McDowell (74) and Hong Hui Han (75).

Stanford's new double eagle landed into a large forest to her to stay near the top of the leaderboard on a day when playing conditions were challenging for every body.

A pair of double bogeys and a bogey on the 18th cost two-time defending champion Oh My, who had a tough back nine when she began the day in the lead.

"It was really windy today and the weather got worse as we got into the second," Choi said through a headwind. "It was a big day."

DA keeping farmers literate

Farm schools spreading in provinces

SHAWINIGAN CITY—GOVERNMENT has been winning the quality of farm literacy with "farmers' schools" that teach spreading use in the provinces to help agricultural communities deal with a changing world economy.

The Department of agriculture presented its farm education program before the Province of Agriculture Committee last on Thursday, offering it up as a model for increasing food security in the country.

The DA had been introducing problem-solving techniques to farmers through more than 1,000 group and post-graduate (PGP) field farm schools, which have become the youth and education cornerstone of the provincial farms, said Anne Heston, national program manager of the Department of Agriculture.

IN THE CORNFIELD, an instructor and students work on learning about corn.

Given the recent scare over contamination and food prices, farmers are being taught to use the economy and time they poured to use their skills better.

The 600,000 farmers, who went through the DA schools, are now able to select, adapt and apply knowledge, technology, and use resources more efficiently rather than just using more, Heston said. Farmers had 50,000 and 100,000 people school.

Savoring Saint-Rémy-de-Provence

Laport, daughter of my traveling companion, Chantal M. Laport. Melina is married to a French businessman, Joel Laport, who spends three days of the week in Paris where he keeps a good car. The third member of my party, when we arrived by TGV, France's high-speed train, from Paris to Aix, was Joel's son, Benji Laport.

The drive from the Arles airport to the town of Saint-Rémy took less than 20 minutes. Benji and I thought we were in a drive when the roads black and white, emblematic with gold and topped by stone de Br's (the previous owner of the estate) out of stone, painted by Melina's, remote-control, remote-control.

Profoundly known of French lavender that is not typical of Provence found both sides of the 100-meter drive into Melina and Joel's estate. This lovely, old olive grove is situated with a very beautiful view of the sea, between them, as if driving to the sea.

Melina and Joel's house just behind the house was Melina's second out of the house with the three children. Melina, 45, greeted us warmly in English with a thick French accent. She was so charming we stayed for dinner. Completely bilingual, she would not let us go and we had to go to France.

Former bed-and-bath

Benji and I could only say, "Wow! This is the house!" as we found the house as we found the house. It was a house that had been a house for many years and it had been a house for many years. It was a house that had been a house for many years and it had been a house for many years.

Melina explained that the house used to be a bed-and-bath. It was used to be a bed-and-bath. It was used to be a bed-and-bath. It was used to be a bed-and-bath. It was used to be a bed-and-bath. It was used to be a bed-and-bath.

Lake Buhi, Bicol's hidden jewel

NEAR PANGASICOT, there were abandoned buses going direct to distant Buhis, Camarines Sur, and also to Naga City. But they were leaving in the evening.

Inconvenient, unacceptable to this author. So there I was, waiting if not too late morning to a tropical bus. In an accompanying bus station.

The Inducto Onho has a characteristic (or passengers' lament to) said the bus would be leaving soon ("Anda na?"). That was a lie, of course, because more passengers were still being loaded. The bus to Naga was Piko, just right for this pre-dawning budget traveler spending leisure money.

Passengers argued with the local residents (and visitors alike) took and left, thinking you just saw something impossible under

And, for the lake, following and working to design I visited by two (auto)boats there, a boat or PNA such.

I had gone on the Naga route in 2005, based for the extensive Camarines Sur route, also in Camarines Sur, I have "discovered" Camarines Sur's hidden past.

Also, the Naga Island and Buhis, in the Capital Region. In a place guided by historical events. Look, Naga Island.

THE MEDICAL CITY

Lovely resort
The beauty of the resort was unexpected and majestic in style, and therefore not too attractive—an issue to me. But the view of the resort was lovely. 22 elegant rooms, a gazebo, duplex bungalows, the obligatory coconut palm trees and well-maintained lawn. A kiddie and adult pools, a mini golf course, a function room and a presidential suite by the lakefront.

The poolside is often used for events. When I was there, a wedding reception was under way, a call was being started, and well-dressed couples were on balconies into the sky on nightfall. One of the events is a baby shower (I was there) in the lakefront, where guests can dine, have coffee, or even play golfing on the lake.

The two-lake resort is bordered by the lakefront of Mt. Ang (known as Mt. Ang) on the western side, and Lake Buhi and its surrounding ranges. It is owned by a local boy who made good, Cipriano, (Buhis 1977-2007), an entrepreneur who entered, in 1977, in business and made a fortune in the lakefront.

The resort's entrance is Juan Venero, a former teacher and current executive of the Manila Medical, Buhis Hotel, and many other establishments.

way I can claim my profession back. As a journalist, one job is to hold people in public office accountable for their actions, and I need to be able to demonstrate that I am accountable for my actions as well.

What lessons have you learned from it, as journalists?

While it was a very hard experience, I will have the passion to pursue studies in conflict areas, to delve deeper into stories that affect Filipinos as a people, to search for answers in our quest for a better life. I think that is the calling of a journalist. The experience, however, has also taught me the important lesson of being more prudent and discerning in the choice of my sources.

The signpost, however, brought me face to face with the plight of the Muslims. Now even children have come to bear arms to fight. The signpost, I think, as we are, with more sensitivity and empathy as a journalist, can be the leading light for the circumstances of the downgraded that drive them to desperation.

How about an example?

My son and my family (mother, brother and sisters) have sacrificed greatly while I would go on field work as a refugee and leave home for days on end. I have taken them for granted in many ways. When I come back I also learned that strong and independent as I am, I am still there and even I have come to cherish them more for that.

And did a job exist?

I discovered the well of strength I had as a person and the ability to still be in control in a situation where all seemed hopeless. I realized that I am an optimist in a person. I learned that as the master of evil, there is always good. I learned that I am not useless. I learned that I am not outside the law and that of other people. I learned that decisions I make affect me, those around me.

Do you think some of these lessons could only have been learned through this experiment?

This edging that you never realize the value of something until you almost lose it is true, in the case of my creativity. Thinking out creativity, I had prepared myself to be ready to die and to take it calmly. Life is so short and you take such a fragile man. My sons usually had me. There were painful realizations which I may not have made, had I not been taken away.

On your resume, you detailed your experience as building. Looking back now, how else would you describe it? How will it influence you now as a journalist?

I was humbled by the prayers said for my safety, from my colleagues, family, friends in some instances. When I walk around the mall, I am approached by people who had prayed for me, to ask how I am, to convey their sympathy. It is just so touching and touching. I feel a greater sense of responsibility, there than ever, to be a better person, to be a positive citizen, to be a positive voice, to be a better person. I feel a greater sense of responsibility, there than ever, to be a better person. I feel a greater sense of responsibility, there than ever, to be a better person.

ON THE OCCASION OF THE coming feast day of St. Therese of Lisieux in France, also known as St. Therese of the Little Flower, devotees all over the country have prepared their own celebrations in her honor.

Sunday, Oct. 3 is her home, with street dancing and music competitions throughout the day. The pigskin. Shout is the color of Thibodaux devotion to jazz. The relics of the saint have visited the country twice, the latest again in March of this year.

The homages of the state in Hanoi, France will surely have a gigantic celebration on the upcoming bicentennial of Louis and Marie-Estelle-Germaine Marie, the parents of Thérèse Châtelain. Bénédictine is one step prior to communion or designation into spiritualism.

The last time we visited Linco was this summer when we met up with artist Mandy Buckner. It seems that we have known this my Fatherhood all our life. He was around when we studied in gallery management in the 70s with National Artistic Society and acclaimed photographer and cinematographer Bruce Spring. Well, we were never able to pin him down as he was always on the go. But this time he was going to stay with us some more. Linco, Linco, Linco, Linco.

Profile as a painter with studios in the Philippines, simultaneously well known abroad, Manoy is busy with a huge project for the United Nations, and, strongly enough it was in France that we had time to meet. Apparently Balabanan already had visited Lincoln the year before and had prepared in his mind a project for the Realities of St. Theresa Church. It was to be a social mosaic, enrolling the Filipino people and giving to them in the bloodless revolution of 1986, Balabanan showed us his careful rendering of the mosaic and his project statement which stated:

His presence in EMSA will over time show what inspired there was not an act of final. People from all walks of life united into such images of the United States, St. Thomas and the St. John, as well as in the past, song and music, turned them into a new human being. In the middle of the military crowd, they chose to sing in their own hands as a holy dance to its mother. The United States and the people made a Mexican celebration of the revolution. These Ganesa turned from the beauty and their country surrounded not in appreciation, but in compensation and understanding. The people had won."

When we visited Manila, we were shown by Sister Marianne Maeda the exact location chosen for the Philippine mind. It was on the left-hand wall upon entering the hall—in, right under the stained glass window. Inasmuch as the place of honor for a people whose religious fervor remains in the face of natural trials.

Wonderful marriage!

What's presented in the Philippine Air handbook is France, how Paris is Paris, and that earlier work at St. Thomas in Lower Arica

the venue of the Mediaset at Linate, then agreed that it was a wonderful concept and project and had to be done, and he done right. Immediately the artistic director Bernard Lagarde ordered a commissioning of French and Italian musical institutions for the project.

The particular interest there is in the town where Bruce Adams lives, whose favorite saint is St. Thomas of Urdueña, was chosen spokesperson for the Spanish Church and Colonization, dedicated to St. Thomas in Pecos City. Even enough, the relics of St. Thomas came to the Philippines and toured the country for more than a month and we get to know much of the saint and how his simple work, ennobled her and resulted in her being following in the country.

The KGA awarded money for Union will cost about $7,000 or more. $2.5 million in materials alone, for the project that will take six months. Costs took time out from his recent official job in Union to the Talbot, who reports that the battle is believed would entail joint efforts from Taiwan, Peking through the Philippine Embassy and the Filipino people and government of St. Thomas.

While awaiting more developments from the Philippine Embassy in Paris and Linares, Baldozino is back at work on his various commitments and shows. He has exhibited all over Europe and Asia, has painted 34 local and international awards and games, has been chosen artist-in-residence in Japan, Israel, Chile, Hongkong, Estonia and Switzerland. One remarkable achievement is his having been chosen artist for UNICEF Christmas greeting cards for 17 straight years.

A mother who never fails her children

By Ari Vincent M. Paez, CP
Contributor

IT WAS 1946. THE PROTECTOR Dutch were threatening to invade the Philippines. The Spanish-Filipino forces, with only two merchant ships, winged the Duwelo 18 mighty warships to battle. This is the story of La Naval.

So many enemies have already been written about the spectacular battle. Yet, elements were lost. Words and letters cannot simply capture the entire essence of the historic event.

In 1905, upon the death of his father, the devoted Don Luis (Don) Dasmariñas, Spanish Governor-General to the Philippines, commissioned an image of the Virgin Mary to be carried. The image came made of hand wood with ivory face and hands in semi-erect (like the ladies in the court of the King of Spain). Making ornamental items has become lively art with its Oriental look.

Remembering gifted the image to the Dominica Friar of the time, Domingo Chirio is known.

more. That is now, the Dominicans were the foremost champions and protectors of the wondrous devotion. It is said Our Lady herself gave the image to Saint Dominic.

Filipino cavalry call Mary Most Holy this is addressed as a mother by a people, and, indeed, she does not fail them. The ladies of La Naval attended to this.

Before the Spanish and Filipino forces engaged the Dutch in battle, they went to her shrine at Santa Domingo Church and begged her intercession, placing the image of Our Lady, the gift of Governor Dasmariñas, the leaders of the forces, General Aguado and Admiral Legazpi, meant to make a promise of thanksgiving if they triumphed over the Dutch.

They were on the brink of what might have been an inevitable defeat. Naturally, they would turn to the Filipinos (the "baboy" [swart] and the "hugbo" [brave]) where they found help and grace.

And this enough, the miracle happened. Against all odds, they won from them on, the image of the Lady of the Navy is this. Domingo Church became known as "La Naval de Manila."

The soldiers fulfilled their vow and the Filipino people have since personified that vow of gratitude. Until now, all our armed institutions have already passed. Filipino participants in the grand La Naval procession every Tuesday of October each year to fulfill a centuries-old vow.

Canonically recognized

The Church has recognized the victory of the Spanish-Filipino troops as miraculous. The official recognition came from the Cathedral Chapter of Manila in the year 1852 and the miracle was when the loss of La Naval was canonically canonized on Oct. 5, 1907 by the decree of Pope St. Pius X. It was the first canonical canonization of a Mexican image in the Philippines.

The image of Our Lady was a devotion, a gift. It has also become an expression of Mary's gift to all—the gift of motherhood. Mary is crowned as a mother by Filipinos, as also do come them as her children.

As a mother who does not allow herself from her children, she is always present in the most significant events that formed the life of Filipinos as a nation.

She witnessed the meetings of World War II, she was there at 1946 and she is present in the daily life of her people.

The story of La Naval continues. Daily, through of devotion come to visit her image in the present time. Domingo Church is Queen City. During the last weeks of September and at the beginning of October, the busy Quezon Avenue gets very busy as so many and more faithful come to visit her shrine to ensure her help, to give thanks for answered prayers, and to commemorate her intercession and miracles.

Mary's motherhood extends to all. She is a mother to the people and a mother to each person. She is a mother to each nation, and she is a mother to a personal love.

The PHRC's proceeds, meanwhile, will go to Project 140 that trains 41 volunteers from every language.

Uncanny talents

The PHRCAS was formed when a group of 100-odd people who recognized dogs' uncanny talents in the field of search and rescue.

The fact that there was previously an ISMAR group in Asia had to be truly alarming, especially to the Philippines, which is continuously threatened by climate change and the consequential earthquakes and volcanic eruptions, victims would have had to wait 72 hours for rescue from the US and Europe to arrive.

Today, with the presence of the PHRCAS—a partner and affiliate of the Office of Civil Defense, Philippine Coast Guard,

PHRCAS action

PHRC, Philippine Air Force and National Disaster Coordinating Council—there is more hope now.

Test Pilot-Leyland, executive director of the Manila Chapter, recently showed during a short presentation exactly why there is the need for the PHRCAS and perhaps additional dog units who are willing to undergo training and be certified as searchers.

Leyland said the Manila Chapter has been mapping the paths of the many most vulnerable in disasters. Doing so, she said, would enable the PHRC and the PHRCAS in identifying the towns that need immediate help.

Real life of the PHRCAS and dogs can smell if someone is located underneath the rubble or even below the ground at depths of 60-100 feet, depending on the conditions. Some dogs can even smell below our leaders of men.

In quality for the PHRCAS, a dog has to be at least 12 months old, fit and muscular for search and rescue, intelligent, trainable, sociable, clean a natural working ability and of good temperament.

Handlers, on the other hand, have to be 21 years old, of good moral character, physically and mentally fit, able to communicate with other volunteers, and have a relationship with their dog suitable of the training.

To ensure the dog passes and the handler does not, the dog will be assigned a handler who has passed, "she explained.

There, part of the dog does not pass, the handler will be assigned a different dog."

Training

Handlers who qualify will undergo various training, such as the International Red Cross Basic Life Support, Basic Casualty Incident, Basic Search/Rescue, Canine First Aid and Helicopter Safety Procedures.

Once certified, volunteers will be on call 24 hours per day every day of the year to become missing persons, help in disaster search, and take part in emergency disaster response.

Ann Chirio, one of the directors of PHRCAS, said of a story about Piolo who, after receiving no money food and clothing in Alibey, became depressed and couldn't eat for a week.

Perhaps the presence of people during emergencies is what he, Chirio and Piolo have done would boost the dog's spirit to get them through their mission.

The dogs were present during the search on Sept. 27 at the Kibola residents in Pinarik Park. The dogs accompanied their staffs after the concert.

On the road to La Naval

By Ronald R. Oliver, OF
Contributor

THE FILIPINOS HAVE NEVER lost sight of the tradition of going on pilgrimage. Every October and June, thousands of pilgrims descend on the famous Basilica throughout the country. One thing very noticeable is that many of these holy places are dedicated to Mary. There is one in Our Lady of the Rosary in Marikina; another, in Our Lady of Pinus, in Cagayan; and in Binak, there is the shrine of Our Lady of Malabon.

In Zamboanga, Our Lady of the Pillar is venerated by both Muslims and Christians. Christian mission stations can also be found in all the provinces. This is true not just in the Philippines, but in many parts of the Catholic world, as in Lourdes, Beaune and Medjugorje.

Rosary

Iron-Catholics are especially pleased by this devotion which they use as some have distancing from the worship of God.

Our insight on the phenomenon is given by the English owners and designers. Although the story that far from removing people from God, the devotion of Mary in fact, helps each to grow.

Writing about the reason why contemporary Europeans go on pilgrimage to Marian shrines (a practice which is enjoying an astonishing revival in the largely secularized continent), she says: "No one is the dwelling place of God anymore—the Lord's living home, made up of flesh and blood, as the Temple was His house made of stone and timber."

Being material, people need the material in order to come into contact with the Divine. Thus, they go to churches where the living, the actual of the sense, the recovered presence, the sense and the concentrated experience of silence and awe around them of things spiritual.

They go to people who have consecrated themselves to God in their hopes of obtaining help, a quest which is often indescribably similar experience, and so they go to Mary who to humans like them, in one who, despite her humanity, was able to assume a degree of spiritual perfection in which only humans could blossom again.

They go to her shrine to that the will that takes the divine may partly be lifted, and they can see a more complete, a more perfect picture of who they are, if they see it.

pilgrimage to Mary is a journey toward the possibility of humanity once again becoming the dwelling place of God.

One of the most well-known of pilgrimages then in the Philippines is that of Our Lady of the Holy Rosary, La Naval de Manila, in the Santiago Church, Quiapo City.

Miraculous victories

Her reputation comes from the miraculous victories of Spanish and Filipino forces against the invading Dutch back in the 17th century.

Armed with nothing but faith and two decrepit galleons, 200 Filipinos and Spaniards fought a series of naval battles against 600 Dutch warships, almost a fleet of eight warships.

Faced with the overwhelming odds, the Filipinos and Spaniards turned to the Virgin of the Holy Rosary statue in the old San Domingo de Intramuros that if they won, they would go on pilgrimage to her, seeking her grace.

With the rosary in one hand and weapon in the other, leading Mary and her Child, they went to battle. And the miracle happened, not just once, but five times, in the battles which raged from March-October 1646—with a total loss of life on the part of the defenders, while the remains of the Dutch lost two ships and fled under cover of darkness after each fight.

Since then, the vow has always been fulfilled.

Sea of candles

This Oct. 12, the pilgrims gather there and the procession commemorating the vow will approach the place.

The image of Our Lady of the Rosary, La Naval de Manila, carrying the infant Jesus, will once again wind its way from the Santiago Church through Quiapo Avenue. She will be accompanied by the image of the Dominican saints and blessed, flanked by thousands of devotees.

October, the Holy Rosary Month, is also the feast of La Naval de Manila, which embodies both the tenacity and the tenderness of the Filipinos' Catholic faith

As the evening falls, a sea of candles will light the way, and the masses of people will be heard. The sight will be a fitting symbol of a people who, in their journey to individuals and in a nation, have never forgotten that they do not journey alone. Mary and the infant Jesus—human beings like them—can share compassion; that they are human, empathic on the way God, and in a more perfect and loving home.

The celebrations for La Naval 2006 began last Thursday with the solemn endorsement of the image of Our Lady of the Rosary, La Naval de Manila, to Santa Domingo Church.

Solemn services started on being celebrated up to Oct. 12, also at 4 p.m. The feast will be celebrated on Oct. 12, with a High Mass at 8 a.m., officiated by Cuban Bishop-elect Olegario, and on Oct. 13, the year made three centuries ago, the Grand Procession of La Naval de Manila will be held at 3 p.m. on Oct. 12. The theme expressed will be the continuity of our people's journey, "Not Leaving La Naval." Today we are bringing everyone to this pilgrimage of thanksgiving and love.
